REDEEMED!

CENTRE'S CAPITAL RETURNS TO ITS ALLEGIANCE—THE ENTIRE REPUBLICAN BOROUGH TICKET ELECTED BY GOOD ROUND MAJORITIES.

Tuesday was a wet day and yet it seemed to be a good day for Republicans; in fact, the democrats didn't seem to "be in it" at all. Every republican on the borough ticket was elected by a good handsome majority; likewise every republican in the North and West wards, while in the South ward the democratic majority was cut down to a pretty small figure. Reeder, for Chief Burgess, had 79 of a majority, while Ray, for tax collector, had the largest—149 majority. Sam Delige, for High Constable, had the smallest, only 39. Leander Green thus proved himself to have been the most popular democrat on the ticket as he had 19 more votes than any other candidate. Good for Leander. The official vote in the borough is as follows:

Distinguished Visitors.

From the Hastings Tribune.

On Wednesday Hastings was favored by a visit from Ex-Governor James A. Beaver and Col. J. L. Spangler, of Bellefonte, two of the men who are in a great measure responsible for the existence of our flourishing town. That we hold these gentleman in high esteem is evidenced by the fact that two of our principal streets bear their names. Gen. Hastings, who, with his usual bad luck, got to name the whole town, was to be here also on Wednesday; but he failed to materialize, and is expected to day, Thursday.

With the party is Robert Cole, of Bellefonte. Mr. Cole is the architect whowill furnish the design for the mansion which the Sterling Company is about to built here. The location of this building has been changed, and it will probably be built on the corner of Harvey street and Fourth avenue.

Messrs, Beaver, Hastings and Spangler have large interests here, and their visits are generally an indication that some improvement is about to be made. They will probably remain a couple of days.

MONEY MARKET!

AN ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK.

A Banker's Views upon the Financial Situation—Substantial Condition of the U. S. Treasury.

[Our Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 15, 1891.

During the past week a change has come over the temper of the Stock Exchange. The rise of the previous week had placed fair profits within the reach of traders, and a series of circumstances have combined to induce holders to realize upon the advance. In the first place there has been and is a general disposition to hold operations in suspense until after the adjournment of Congress, so as to escape being caught with any of the surpluses which are apt to be forthcoming at the last stages of the session, and the more so as there are still pending several measures of unusual importance, including the Silver Bill. In the next place the continued introduction into the Minnesota Legislature of measures adverse to the railroads has had a discouraging effect upon the range of stocks subject to Granger influences. And again, the announcement of the failure of two small banks in Massachusetts has had a temporarily depressing bearing; besides which, the extraordinary decline in the earnings of the Atchison and Topeka road has operated discouragingly.

But the main factor contributing to this change of tone has been an entirely unexpected sharp advance in the rates for sterling and for marks up to the point admitting of exports of gold, some $1,750,000 having been engaged for shipment. This had produced a certain measure of scare; for although the banks are unusually well stocked with gold, yet it is felt that there is still a remnant of sensitiveness in the loan market which might easily grow into an unsettled feeling, in the event of our losing a few millions of specie. And yet there are no obvious reasons for expecting that the export will run to any serious extent.

The loan of £3,000,000 sterling by the Bank of France to the Bank of England is now about maturing. One-third of the amount was paid within the past week, leaving two millions sterling still to be provided for. The Bank of England, however, had, a week ago, nearly £5,000,000 more gold than at the same date for the average of the last five years; and the fact of its reducing its rate of discount to 3 per cent. on the 5th instant showed that the managers could have apprehended no difficulty in providing for these payments to the Bank of France. Moreover, the rate for money in the London open market is only 1½ and 1¾ per cent., indicating that the present state of exchange here is less likely to have arisen from any pressure at London than from causes on this side. It is not unusual for the rates of exchange to rule high at New York in February and March. In those two months of 1889 we exported about $5,700,000 in gold, and for the last six years the shipments for those months have averaged close upon $3,000,000. It is quite likely that the obligations incurred against the extra importations of goods made in anticipation of the new tariff may now be maturing and causing a special demand for sterling bills.

It is probably in causes of this nature, together with an indisposition on the part of London to take our securities until the failure of free coinage has become an accomplished fact, that the main explanation of this unexpected outflow of gold is to be found. Provided the Bank of England should be able to keep up its present ample cash reserve—which is probable in view of the above facts—and that the free silver bill should be defeated, it is quite possible that London orders for our securities may send gold hither more freely than it is now being sent out.

The foregoing causes have mainly produced the present change of temper, and it is likely that their effects may remain until the adjournment of Congress clears the political atmosphere and makes it possible to forecast the course of affairs for the next twelve months. For the next two or three weeks, therefore, it is probable we may witness a dull and hesitating condition of affairs, affording favorable chances for picking up stocks for future advantage; but it is not likely to be attended with any very pronounced decline. It is not easy to discover anything in the future calculated to encourage "bear" operations, while there are elements which may later on develop into a buying movement. The operation of the Silver Act of last summer has already added over $30,000,000 to the circulation of the country, and this increase will be swelled at the rate of $5,000,000 each successive month; which is calculated to exercise an inflating effect upon prices. Then, as an offset to the current export of specie, it is to be remembered that the reserves of the banks stand unusually high, the amount of surplus shown in last week's statement being $20,700,000 as compared with $12,000,000 on an average for the same time of the last two years and $15,500,000 for the last four years. It is also to be kept in mind that the large prospective increase in the payments of the Treasury, without any corresponding gain in revenue, is likely to keep the Treasury balance much below the usual figures. Under these circumstances a continuance of ease in the money market is reasonably assured. Again the steady demand for railroad bonds is evidence of a healthy condition of the investment movement and the continuous advance in those securities may be reasonably expected to have its effect upon the value of stock at a later period. It also deserves attention that the gross January earnings of railroads turn out on the whole better than has been expected, and promise to show, when the figures are in, some improvement on the business of January last year, which exhibited a gain of 13.3 per cent. The prospects as to silver legislation cannot be taken into these forcasts, as the problem still remains undetermined. The probabilities however strengthen daily against the chances of any change from the law as it now stands, and the realization of such a result would be likely to prove an important "bull" factor both at New York and London.

Under the circumstances above reviewed, I regard the current relapse in the Stock Market as likely to prove transient; but still, for the present, recommend buying only on weak spots and realizing on succeeding rallies.

The week's currency movement between the interior and the New York banks shows a gain of about $500,000 to the latter, while on the transactions with the Sub-Treasury the banks lose $969,000. Including the gold withdrawn for export, the banks have made a net loss of currency during the week of about $2,200,000. HENRY CLEWS.

Why do They Hesitate?

Men Without Money Willing to work for Nothing to Help Build the Road.

The following item appeared in the Lock Haven Democrat of last Saturday, the 14th:

"The Beech Creek railroad, according to the Bellefonte papers, seems to be the only salvation for that place. There's dead loads of money in Bellefonte. Why don't the capitalists shell out and have the great B. C. trunk line extended into that beautiful borough? The papers there say that the cessation of their iron industries is caused by the enormous freight rates asked by the Pennsylvania railroad. If this be true, there is only one thing to do, and that is to have a competing trunk. What are Bellefonte millionaires hesitating about?"

Now that is just the question that is worrying the people of Bellefonte who are not millionaires. A gentleman said the other day to a NEWS representative that he had no money to give, but he would willingly go on the line and work one week, two weeks or a month, if that would be any inducement; and he also said he felt satisfied he could answer for one hundred other men in Bellefonte who would do the same.

This assertion caused the NEWS to have inquiries made of men in and around Bellefonte, and in every instance men without money have declared their willingness to work two weeks for only their board, and a great many for nothing, if it was necessary, to get the competing line. This shows the state of feeling for the completion of the road from Beech Creek to Bellefonte. As the NEWS stated on a former occasion, one company in New York has offered to furnish half the funds required to build the road; a Bellefonte man offers to contribute twenty-five thousand, and the whole thing will not cost over $250,000. And now the laboring men of Bellefonte offer to contribute labor to help grade the track. Surely the millionaires of Bellefonte ought now come to the rescue and subscribe to the fund to build the road. Everybody knows it would be the making of our little mountain town. It would at once put new life and new energy into our industries; why then delay?

Are there not moneyed men in Bellefonte who have the interest and welfare of the town at heart, who will take hold of this matter and see what can be done? Let some one try it at once.

A Pennsylvania Girl Gets It.

A year ago a free college education was offered by The Ladies' Home Journal to the girl securing the most subscriptions before January 1, 1891. Miss Grace Patterson, of Beaver Falls, Pa., has just been declared the winner, after a competition which has attracted wide attention. Miss Patterson will have all her expenses paid for four years at any American college she may choose by the Journal management.

Two of our county's great men gone almost within the same day. Twenty five years ago they both fought for one common cause, the preservation of the union, and they both lived to see it reunited and grow into one of the grandest governments on the face of the earth. In life they were true servants of their country, in death may their ashes rest in peace.

SENATOR MEEK personally informs us that the object of his retail license bill is to cut down the number of licenses granted. To prohibit the granting of more than at the rate of one license for every seven hundred population. Also that it is discretionary with the court as to how few he may grant. This being the case we acknowledge Mr. Meek's bill as all O. K.

THAT THREE DOLLAR TAX BILL.

Considerable discussion has been occasioned over the bill recently introduced into the Senate by Senator Meek, of this district, entitled "An act authorizing the assessment of an annual poor tax upon unnaturalized persons within the commonwealth, providing for its collection, and fixing a penalty upon employees refusing to make a return of such persons in their employ." The bil provides the rate of tax as three dollars annual to be paid at the rate of 25 cents each month to the overseer of the poor in their respective districts. It provides that all employers shall furnish the names and number of such unnaturalized foreigners in their employ; and also further provides that in case of a failure to do so, or in the failure of their employees to pay the assessment, such firm or firms shall be held responsible for the same.

Now this bill, were it passed, became a law and could be enforced, would be a grand thing for this State, and even for Centre county. Several hundred dollars are annually spent in this county to help the poor and bury unfortunate foreigners who take sick or die within our borders, and with such a law the tax recovered from that source would about pay for the expense of their keeping.

But while such a law would be a very nice thing, to pass it would be all useless legislation as it is entirely unconstitutional, and it is indeed surprising that Mr. Meek would introduce such a bill unless, well, unless it is a scheme to future greatness. If our readers will take the trouble to look at the Constitution of the United States they will see that it very specifically states that no direct tax can be imposed upon unnaturalized foreigners, and everybody knows that a state can't legislate against the Constitution of the United States. Therefore if Senator Meek desires his bill to become a law that can be enforced he must first have the Constitution of the United States amended.

George Crawford Appointed.

Sheriff Ishler last Saturday appointed George Crawford, of Gregg township, as deputy sheriff. The selection is a good one and shows the Sheriff's clear-sightedness and long-headedness. Mr. Crawford is a smart young man and will undoubtedly make an excellent official. We congratulate him on his appointment. But poor Jim; how he must feel! Two weeks ago he said he was sure of it; in fact was as good as appointed. But with all his assurance he missed it.

False Pretense and Forgery.

The following appeared in Monday's papers as a special dispatch from Philadelphia.

Louis Baxter, of Philipsburg, Pa., was arrested last night by Detectives Bond and Murray on two charges of false pretense and forgery, preferred by Edward McCormick, of the same place.

McCormick says he indorsed three notes, two for $500 and one for $700 for Baxter, and that he raised the last note to $1,700 by placing the figure 1 in front of the 7. He also obtained goods from the Columbus Carriage Company, of Cincinnati, O., on strength of the notes, claiming that he was in the carriage business in Philipsburg.

Governor and Mrs. Beaver and family, after sojourning a few weeks in Bellefonte, will soon depart for Philadelphia where they will remain perhaps a month or six weeks, returning to Bellefonte about the first of April by which time their own home will be repaired and remodeled and ready for their occupancy.

What Andrews Cost the County.

MR. EDITOR: From the County Auditor's statement for 1890 we glean the following account of the expenses paid by the county for the arrest, trial, conviction and execution of Alfred Andrews for the murder of Clara Pike. Both the murderer and his victim were residents of Clearfield county, but the crime was committed in this county while the parties were crossing over a small portion of our territory:

| | |
|---|---|
| Paid to sundry witnesses | $621 57 |
| " John H. Orvis for assisting J. C. Myers to prosecute | 275 00 |
| " J. L. Spangler for defense | 100 00 |
| " Dr. Formad, expert chemist | 220 00 |
| " G. G. Ford. " " | 275 00 |
| " Linden Detective Agency | 89 06 |
| " Harry Simler, (reward,) for arresting Andrews | 150 00 |
| " for surveying place where crime was committed | 61 30 |
| " District Attorney's expenses to Philadelphi a | 15 29 |
| " for burial of Andrews | 25 00 |
| " " executing Andrews | 15 00 |
| " " special guards | 16 00 |
| " " medical attendance | 5 00 |
| " " vest for Andrews | 1 50 |
| Total | $1880 62 |

One thousand eight hundred and eighty dollars and sixty-two cents is a pretty round sum for a trial of that kind, to which might be added $300 for court expenses, and we have the total of the whole cost amounting to $2,180.62, exclusive of the expense of Andrews' board.

The fact that the District Attorney who had charge of the case, and the counsel employed to assist him, and for the defense, were all Democrats, the reader can see at a glance how the Democrats farm the county funds when opportunity offers.

To say that the fees of the attorneys were exorbitant is stating it mildly. And there is the sum of $475 paid two expert chemists whose testimony was for the simple purpose of sustaining Orvis in one of his improbable theories, which was not necessary to convict, and which had no weight with the jury in mak ing up its verdict, is food for serious contemplation.

District Attorney Myers' bill is not stated in the report, for what reason we do not know, but we venture the assertion that if the whole case was closely scrutinized there would be found a Democratic steal of six or seven hundred dollars. Great is Democracy. *

Of the particular Herbs for curing and preventing disease by disinfecting and changing the nature of impure air as breathed i the lungs was discovered over 50 years ago by AUNT RACHAEL SPEER, an old noted nurse now over 86 years old, who, from her youth up has been the most successful nurse known

She always has and still does go through rain or shine to freely answer calls from the sick.

It was at labor of love without pay and without price.

AUNT RACHAEL has gathered the Herbs and made and applied thousands of these pad to rich and poor, without charge, and in every nstance the effects were wonderful.

The Pad is made by quilting certain herb and medicine between flaps of muslin, and when worn they are made wet or damp, at frequent intervals, with a tincture which accompanies the Pad.

This tincture combining with the Herbs in the Pad is absorbed through the pores of the skin and the aroma that arises before the nostrils purifies the air you breathe. It is a prevention and cure.

Will be Here February 21st.

Some time ago an announcement was made in these columns that General B. F. Fisher would shortly appear in Bellefonte to deliver his lecture, that is famous in this and neighboring States, entitled, "Reminiscenses of Prison Life During the War;" the lecture to be delivered under the auspices and for the benefit of the relief fund of Gregg Post. We can to-day announce that all arrangements have been completed and General Fisher will be here and lecture in the Court House on Saturday evening, February 21st. Major McCauley, the best singer in the Grand Army, will accompany him on his visit here.

It is but a just tribute to General Fisher to say that he has made a most liberal offer of his services to the Post that they may thereby be enabled to realize more for the worthy object for which the lecture is given. It is also due Gen. Hastings to say that it was through him that General Fisher was secured, and that he will bring him here and entertain him while in Bellefonte.

Words of commendation are also due the County Commissioners for their liberality in giving the court house for this occasion. They have placed a resolution on the minutes in which they resolve not to give the court house to any organization for any purpose, but as the object of this is charity for our neighbor they considered it but right to grant the house, and certainly every man in Centre county will commend their action in this instance.

At this season of the year when malaria lurks in the air, and bad colds not an unfrequent visitor, we long for a quick and effective remedy. There is scarcely a home without a sufferer from some of the many ills the flesh is heir to. A stimulant is after the intermediator. It is quick and effective. It brings relief and saves doctors bills. We can reccommend Mr. Max Klein for anything in the liquor line. His silver age Rye at $1 50 per quart is the best whiskey in the market. He will sell any Pennsylvania Rye Whiskey, six years old, at 1 00 for each quart, or six for $5 00. Send for his price list and catalogue and mention this paper.

No Work for the Boys.

We have been informed that an order has been issued at the nail works that on and after Monday, February 16th, boys under the age of eighteen years will not be employed at the works. The reasons given are that such boys should be spending their time at school and the places they occupy should be given to men who have families dependent on them and who otherwise would be forced to remain idle.

The Four Mills Tax.

The extraordinary county expenses for 1890 were the payment of thirteen thousand dollars for the re-erection of county bridges swept away by the disastrous flood of the year previous, and two thousand and eighty dollars for the arrest, trial, conviction and execution of Alfred Andrews, two incidents that the likes of which are not likely to occur again during this generation. The bill now before the State Legislature, which will pass, re-imburses counties for the extraordinary expenses of rebuilding the bridges destroyed by the June flood of 1889, consequently Centre county will receive from the State treasury at least thirteen thousand dollars, and this will leave a surplus in the county treasury for the year 1891, of $8,400, under a two mills tax.

Notwithstanding that fact, the plundering Democratic county ring officials insist on a four mills county tax, while a two mills tax, under Republican rule, was sufficient for the payment of all necessary expenses, besides leaving a snug surplus in the county treasury. We surmise that three years of unscrupulous Democratic rule will make the eyes of the tax-payers stand wide open.

Special Announcement.

We have made arrangements with Dr. J B Kendall Co., publishers of a Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," which will enable all our subscribers to obtain a copy of that valuable work free by sending their address (enclosing a two cent stamp for mailing same) to Dr. J. B Kendall Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt. This book is now recognized as a standard authority upon all diseases of the horse, as its phenomenal sale attests, over four million copies having been sold in the past ten years, a sale never before reached by any publication in the same period of time. We feel confident that our patrons will appreciate the work, and be glad to avail themselves of this opportunity of obtaining a valuable book.

It is necessary that you mention this paper in sending for the 'Treatise.' This offer will remain open for only a short time.

Prohibition Expounded.

Prof. Patton lectured in the court house on Tuesday evening on the subject of prohibition. Although the subject was well-worn yet it was presented in such a new light and thorough and minute manner by Mr. Patton as to make the lecture doubly interesting. The speaker is an elegant talker and has such thorough knowledge of his subject that one can listen with interest and benefit to himself. Mr. Patton talked for an hour and a half and there was not one sleepy person in the court house, and there was a good sized audience, too.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found before he had used half a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any Throat, Lung or Chest Trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at W. C. Keplinger & Co.'s drug store.

Found in a Pullman Car.

Last Saturday night, while an employe of the Pullman company was inspecting the car "Atlantic" which had been hauled into the Chicago shops for repair, he found beneath the cushions of a seat a roll of bills amounting to ten thousand dollars. The dispatch conveying the above intelligence failed to state what was done with the money.

Visiting Their Old Home.

Mrs. Anna Roller and her sister, Miss Lizzie Dale, of Prairie Home, Shelby county, Ill., who have been visiting friends in Clearfield county, passed through Bellefonte on Wednesday en route for Houserville, their former home. The ladies gave a very vivid and flattering account of their new home in Illinois to which they expect to return in a couple of weeks. While in Bellefonte they made a call at this office. Come again ladies; there is nothing like a visit from the fair sex, to lighten the surroundings and dispel the clouds that generally hang over an editor's den.

AN EXPLANATION.

Ex-Tax Collector Keichline Explains the "Big Exonerations" of 1889 and 1890.

MR. EDITOR:—I have been informed that the tax payers are complaining because the Town Council exonerated me of so large an amount of taxes; that they are not able to understand why it was done and wish an explanation. It is perfectly right that they should have one. The members of the town council done their duty and that is all. They exonerated me of no taxes only what they had a right to exonerate. The old board of County Commissioners, after the assessment was made and the duplicate placed in my hands as collector, reduced the valuation of a large amount of real estate in the North Ward, which fact increased the amount of exonerations hundreds of dollars. I have the certificates that were issued by them in my possession which will explain to any person who desires an explanation. The law compels the council to exonerate me from these amounts of taxes, as well as taxes on other property which is exempt by law. For instance: The electric light works and the Bellefonte Furnace property, which was assessed and paid taxes in Spring township; the parsonages in the borough of Bellefonte—four in number—all this reduced the actual taxes and increased the amount of exonerations.

I was charged with all the reduction in the valuation of property, errors and mistakes in assessment; also with all the exonerations of taxes accredited to the poor of Bellefonte made by special acts of council and which were not asked by me as collector. The council will inform any person that desires to know that the exonerations asked for by me, outside of the above mentioned cases, were small amounts and would not aggregate a very large sum. I have hundreds of dollars yet to collect off the poor people of this borough, some of which I never expect to get. The reason I presented my list of exonerations thus early was that I preferred to settle with the old council, as they were familiar with all the the exonerations asked, the reasons, etc.; and another reason was that I was anxious to pay over all the money I owed them in order that the old council would go out of office with a good financial standing.

I venture to say that the present council will go out with the best financial record that any council has gone out with for the last twenty years. If they do not it is not my fault. The duplicates of 1889 and 1890 will be settled and the money paid over and the new council will go in with plenty of money in the treasury, a thing which has never been known before in the history of this borough.

But on the other hand, there will not be any old duplicates to fall back on for funds. I am grateful to the borough treasurer for the courtesy he has extended to me in the past. It is true that he would make me get up and dust sometimes, saying that he was short of funds, but this was all for my benefit. I am also grateful to the finance committee for the good treatment and courtesy that I received at their hands in the settlement of duplicates, and I am grateful to all members of the council for passing upon the exonerations presented to them by me. I am also grateful to the voters of the borough—Republicans and Democrats—for their suffrage extended to me in the past.

This is not my farewell address; I am going to stay right here with you, providing the Lord is willing. I am as good a democrat to-day as I was the day I was born, and as good a democrat as I was last spring when the democratic party defeated me for tax collector. You find me taking an active part in politics at the February election, providing a good ticket is nominated. I believe in honest politics and I believe in electing honest men to office who will pay their honest debts.

His Counterpart in Durance Vile in Chillicothe, Ohio.

A PROMINENT CITIZEN OF BELLEFONTE LEARNS OF HIS INCARCERATION AND HAS HIM HELD FOR IDENTIFICATION.

Owing to the fact that a murder was committed in our midst last fall and the perpetrator of the deed having been imprisoned and escaped therefrom, the 23d of December last, it has been a matter of interest to everybody in this vicinity, that the fugitive should be apprended.

As I have developed some facts during the past week, I am requested to furnish them for publication. On *M*onday the 9th inst., I started to go to Dayton, Ohio, to attend to some business there.

I arrived in Columbus, Ohio Tuesday morning the 10th inst., one hour late; took breakfast in the station restaurant, after which I learned that all the trains were late and that I would be detained at least one hour. I purchased a copy of the Ohio State Journal and took a seat in the car to read the news. As I had plenty of time, I read about everything on the first page of the paper and noticed a paragraph headed Chillecothe, Ohio.

(The above paragraph has already been published.)

*M*y first impression was that the prisoner under arrest, calling himself Frank Rolland and having a letter in his possession, possibly written by himself, and signed Frank Wilson, might be the man who called himself John Wilson, who had escaped from our prison.

I immediately purchased another copy of the paper, marked the paragraph and mailed the same to ex-Sheriff Cooke, Howard, Pa.

After the train started from Columbus, the question revolved in my mind, that as a citizen of Bellefonte, it was my duty to make further investigation. When I arrived at Xenia, Ohio, I failed to make the connection for Dayton, therefore I had to wait fifty minutes for the next train, during that time I sent the following telegram to the *M*arshall at Chillicothe, Ohio, who would be called Chief of Police in Pennsylvania towns:

XENIA, 2 10th, 1891.

To the Marshal, Chillicothe, O.,

Hold Rolland or Wilson in custody until I can arrive to-morrow. Wire answer to Dayton, care Phillips House.

When I arrived at Dayton I received the following answer:

CHILLICOTHE, 2 10th, 1891.

Wm. Shortlidge, Phillips House,

Will hold him. [Signed,]

ALEX. RUDEMAN, Marshal.

After telegraphing to the *M*arshal I cut the paragraph from the paper and wrote a letter to District Attorney *M*eyer, advising him of what I had learned and what I proposed to do, enclosing the paragraph to him.

As soon as I had attended to my business in Dayton, I took the train at 4.15 p. m. on Wednesday, arriving at Chillicothe at 7.34.

The *M*arshal met me at the Warner House and told me he had shown my name to the prisoner and asked him if he recognized that name, he said he did not. The *M*arshall remarked, "I believe you are a fugitive from justice," he did not reply but hung his head and looked confused. I want you to let me out of this; you have no right to keep me here. If I had some money I would soon get a lawyer to take me out on a writ of habeas corpus. This is about the only time he betrayed himself.

I called at the city prison about 9 o'clock on Thursday morning in company with the Marshal and had an interview with the prisoner. He said he was twenty-six years old, but owing to exposure he perhaps looks older than that. He is five feet six inches high in his shoes, and said that he weighed one hundred and forty-five pounds. I would judge he was somewhat heavier. He has a florid complexion, a small sandy moustache, and his hair was very much darker in color than his moustache, his hands seemed to be somewhat large but his feet corresponded to his size. He has one double tooth out on the right and one single tooth out of the left front of his upper jaw. He has all the teeth in the lower jaw, all of which are bri ht and clean, although he chewed tobacco. His nose was quite long in appearance, was full on the right side and was depressed or somewhat curved on the left.

He claimed to be of German descent, said he was born in Buffalo, New York, and was a moulder by trade. He insisted that he had never been in Pennsylvania. He refused to give any account of himself—would not tell us where he learned to be a moulder and gave us no information as to where he had been employed. He refused to have his photograph taken and was very emphatic in this refusal.

The authorities said that they would try to secure it.

They gave me a letter which they found among his effects, and agreed to hold him in custody until I could return home and communicate with them.

The chirography of this letter has been examined in comparison with other letters held by *Mr. M*eyer which were written to a woman in Bellefonte and which are in the hands of *M*eyer.

It is the opinion of competent judges that they were written with one and the same hand. James Hughes gave a description of him which corresponds very closely to mine, especially his nose. Ex-Sheriff Cooke pronounced the writing in the letter I brought as corresponding to Wilson's hand writing. A number of other persons also concur with me in the description. If he is not the right man, he is unfortunate in his appearance and general make up.

A Graduate of Medicine.

Being a graduate of a Medical College, I am of course prejudiced against all secret proprietary medicines, but I am compeled to say, after being cured of a violent case of Inflammatory Rheumatism, that S. S. S. is the remedy for that disease. I took S. S. S. after everything else had failed. I had all sorts of treatment with the best physicians: Had the Turkish bath treatment; went to Hot Springs, Ark.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Colorado Springs and to California; but no relief. Then I started home, tired and worn, disgusted with medicine, a friend persuaded me to take S. S. S. and I did it more to gratify him than from any hope of cure, and the first bottle put me far on the road to permanent cure. I continued it until I am sound and well. GEO. B. # A Big Rain.

THE WATER ALMOST AS HIGH AS IN JUNE, 1889.

It has now rained for almost thirty-six consecutive hours, commencing Sunday night. It rained very hard some of the time on Monday night. During the night it also thundered and lightninged. The waters are raising very rapidly and if it don't soon quit raining there is danger of a flood. A telephone dispatch from Clearfield this forenoon stated that there was a 9 foot flood in the river at that place. At Lock Haven the river was about five foot above high water mark at an early hour this morning and then the up river flood had not reached there yet. Very high water is anticipated but no danger is so far apprehended.

LATER REPORTS.

At 10:15 the telephone dispatches from Clearfield stated that the water had risen seven feet in four hours and was then sixteen feet above the high water mark. All the lower parts of the town are flooded, and great alarm is felt. It is still raining and the waters raising.

At Curwensville the water is as high as it was in June, 1889. There is great consternation and alarm among the people of that place. Rain is falling and the waters still raising.

At 10:20 there was a nine-foot flood at Williamsport and seven-foot flood at Lock Haven, and raising at the rate of 10 inches an hour. Word from up the river had been telephoned to both these places to tie up their booms, but the river was too high—they could not, and what logs came down had to go. Both Williamsporters and Lock Havenites fear that the water will again submerge these towns. People who have them are getting boats ready, in order to be prepared for any emergency.

The Bald Eagle is away up and raising rapidly. Spring creek is within two feet of being as high as it was in the June flood. (Bellefonte need not be alarmed, as the town stands too high to suffer much damage by the flood.) It looks now as if this might be a repetition of the time almost two years ago.

Dispatches from Johnstown state that the town is all overflowed and the people are wild with alarm. Most all the bridges on the Conemaugh have been swept away and communication is entirely cut off. The people are taking to boats and fleeing to the hilltops. It is still raining and the snow melting.

Last Tour to Washington.

The series of tours arranged this winter by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company from Pittsburg to Washington, have been remarkably successful, due in a great measure to the liberal rate and high standard of service maintained. The one remaining tour to leave March 5th, will undoubtedly carry its full complement of passengers.

Excursion tickets, good for ten days from date of sale, admitting of a stop-over in Baltimore in either direction within the proper limit, will be sold from Pittsburg at $9,00, and at correspondingly low rates from other stations in Western Pennsylvania. The tickets will be good for use on any regular train of the dates above named, except limited express trains; and in addition to the regular service a special train of parlor cars and day coaches will leave Pittsburg at 8 a. m., and run through to Washington, stopping at the principal stations. The return coupons will be valid for passage on any regular train within the return limit, except the Pennsylvania Limited. The rates are unusually low, and the limitation of the tickets ample for a most pleasurable trip.

ON SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

TWO LARGE MEETINGS HELD SUNDAY IN ITS INTEREST—VERY INTERESTING SPEECHES.

The court house was crowded on Sunday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock the time for the opening of the Sabbath Observance meeting announced to be held there at that time. Governor Beaver presided and, after singing by the choir and an invocation by Rev. W. A. Houck, Mr. Beaver spoke, explaining the object of the meeting as being the gathering together of a christian people in a christian community to enter protest to proposed legislation and also against the keeping of the World's Fair open on Sunday. The proposed legislation has reference to the bill introduced by Mr. Fow, of Philadelphia, authorizing the repeal of the Act of 1794, generally known as the Sunday law, or the "old blue law."

The speaker advanced some strong arguments against the repealing of the old law among which were the demands of the physical man for one day out of seven as a day of rest; the necessity of a day set apart as a day for Divine worship, and the great danger there would be of an overthrow of our form of government should such a bill pass. Dr. J. McCartney, general secretary of the Pennsylvania Sabbath Observance Association, made a short address, in which he urged the people of Bellefonte to do all in their power to protest against the passage of Mr. Fow's bill and also the keeping open of the World's Fair on Sunday.

General D. H. Hastings was the next speaker and, in his clear ringing tones, said he did not believe that more than ten per cent. of our legislators were in favor of the repealing of the law of 1794. That the legislature of this State would not dare pass a bill that was so at variance with the popular will of the people. The General said that as far as the keeping open of the World's Fair was concerned, he personally knew that two-thirds of the members of that Commission were opposed to doing it and if the people all over the United States would set their seal of condemnation on it he was satisfied it would not be done. The speaker closed with a very affecting story of the first Sunday spent at Johnstown after the great flood.

Judge Furst was down for a speech but was not present. Rev. Laurie read a resolution in effect that it was the sense of the meeting that they protest against the repealing of the law of 1794 and against the keeping open of the World's Fair on Sunday and that copies of said resolution be sent to the Senate and House in Harrisburg and also to the World's Fair Commission. The paper was unanimously adopted. D. F. Fortney made the closing speech which, though brief, was to the point. Rev. James P. Hughes pronounced the benediction and the meeting was dismissed.

In the evening a large congregation assembled in the Presbyterian church and listened to a discussion of the question as made by Dr. McCartney, and Rev. Wm. Laurie, and Rev. W. A. Houck. This meeting was also extremely interesting.

Feels Sure He is the Man.

Mr. Shortlidge feels very confident that the man held at Chillicothe, is the same man that killed Harry Waterhouse in Bellefonte last September. From what he saw of the man and the minute discriptions given him by those who saw Wilson while incarcerated in the Bellefonte jail, Mr. Shortlidge thinks there can be no doubt as to the two men being identical. Mr. Meyer expects a picture of the man at Chillicothe to-day and, if it resembles Wilson, it is more than likely a man will be sent out to Ohio to identify the prisoner.

"PALMA NON SINE PULVERE."

Freshman Class of State College Holds their First Annual Banquet on Friday Evening.

"Palma Non Sine Pulvere;" and in this instance the supper was not gained without kicking up considerable dust, according to reports from State College. For years past it has been the custom of the Freshman class to give a banquet and, naturally, the boys desired to continue the custom this year. From out of the class *M*essrs. Roger Bowman, T. Holmes Walker and Ralph F. *M*artin were selected as a committee on arrangements, and they performed the work so secretly and so faithfully that the "Solphs" knew nothing of the affair until last night. When they were apprised of the fact they endeavored to have some fun (?) by keeping the Freshy's from the supper, but they met with little success. By the time they got their men in line two hack loads had already gone; the third one had to stand the rampage. The Solph's smashed the stiff hats of Freshmen, cut the harness from the horses and made a general attack. Of course that put an end to coming that way but nothing daunted the Freshmen ran to the Buffalo Run railroad and, getting there just in time, they jumped on board and came to Bellefonte.

At the appointed hour the class, about 35 in number, and a few invited guests making a total of forty persons, gathered around the highly decorated tables in the parlors of Mr. Achenbach's fashionable restaurant on Bishop street, and partook of a banquet, the like of which has never been excelled in Bellefonte. Following is the menu served:

Blue Points on half shell.

White Reisling.

Consomme a la Royal.

Roast turkey, stuffed. Cranberries.

Veal chops, a la Mayonnaise.

Scalloped oysters.

Chicken salad.

French peas a la cream cabbage.

Roman Punch.

Ice cream croquettes, Charlotte Russe.

Angel Food. Lady Fingers. Macrarons. Kisses. Wafers

Oranges, Bananas, Grapes,

Salted Almonds. Cheese.

Black Coffee.

Cigars and Cigarettes.

After the banquet came the toasts and the following is a full programme of the same:

Toastmaster—E. J. Edwards.

Our College.....B. A. Musser
"There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple."

Our Class.....A. G. Guyer
"As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather."

The Ladies.....A. D. Belt
"May the snowy wings of innocence and love protect thee."

Our Professors.....P. P. Sturdevant
"How they are increased that trouble me."

Our Past.....A. D. Knittle
"And departing, leave behind footprints on the sands of time."

Our Future.....E. A. Pyne
"Heaven in its bosom from our knowledge hides."
"Hast thou a charm to stay the morning star?"

That this annual banquet will be long remembered by the young gentlemen who compose the Freshman class goes without saying. In future years it will be viewed as a bright spot in their college life. And though they now realize the meaning of their class motto, yet will they then know that the palm is the brighter for having been gained in that way.

THE FRESHMEN SPEAK OUT

MR. EDITOR:—In the issue of your paper dated February 14th, there appeared an article entitled "That College Scrimmage," signed "An Observer." In justice to ourselves, as members of the class of '94, we think it no more than right that the readers of your paper should know the real facts in the case.

First the article states that "by unceasing watchfulness the Sophs possessed themselves of the time it was to occur." Such, however, was not the case, as they received their information through Wm. Stuart, a sub B Preps.

Next, as regards the starting, it states that they were in the laboratory and allowed the Freshmen to gain their seats and to make a start. If such had been the case they could by no means have overtaken the Freshmen, as the chemical laboratory is some distance in the rear of the main building

The article states that the Sophs stopped two of the coaches and in the scrimmage that then ensued 27 Sophs defeated 48 Freshmen and 15 Juniors. In refutation of this we would say that the whole number of gentlemen in our class is but 35, and also we would state that 14 of these got away in two coaches so that we had 21 men in the scrimmage. Only 3 Juniors took active part while fully as many Seniors, with quite a number of preparatory students assisted the Sops.

It further states that the "freshmen would not have been able to have made their way to Bellefonte had not the President appeared." Such was not the case, as the President, after having, as he supposed, stopped the scrimmage, repaired to his office when the Sophs again went in pursuit of the freshmen. But the freshmen outwitted the Sophs and by twos and threes made their way to Lemont and to the Buffalo Run railroad where they boarded the trains for Bellefonte.

It furthur states that the sophomores, although not of large average size, have won a number of victories from their rival classmen." In refutation of this we append the score of the cane rush and foot ball games. The cane rush was won by us with a total of 8 men to the Sophs 7. The foot ball game was won by us with a score of 10 to 6.

As to winning anything from the Juniors we would say that they forfeited their foot ball game to the Juniors by their non-appearance and as to other sports we think that the Sophs will openly acknowledge the superiority of the Juniors.

As to the truth of our statements we refer your readers to the Faculty of the Pennsylvania State College.

SMITH—HECKMAN.

CENTRE HALL THE SCENE OF A BRILLIANT WEDDING ON WEDNESDAY.

One of the largest weddings of the season took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Heckman, near this place, on Wednesday. The bride was their amiable daughter, Miss Emma, one of the most esteemed young ladies of this vicinity, and the groom Dr. D. G. Smith, of Freeburg, Pa., formerly of Penn Hall. The day was bright and the sleighing fine, and the number of invited ones large. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Isenberg, of this place. As the hands of the clock neared the hour of twelve the guests awaited with expectency the arrival of the wedding party, just at that hour the wedding march was struck up, Miss Anna Keller presiding at the organ, and the wedding party entered the room. The bride and groom were preceded by Mr. Frank Reigle, of Freeburg, Pa., Mr. Samuel Kreamer, of Centre Hall, Mr. David Foreman, of Bellefonte and Mr. Frank Fisher, of Penn Hall. The above gentlemen parted and allowed the contracting parties to pass and face the minister. The ceremony was brief and very impressive, and the guests allowed not a word to escape, the responses being delivered in clear and distinct tones. After the ceremony congratulations by all were showered upon the groom, on his luckily winning so estimable a young lady as a helpmate, and the bride was presented with the best wishes of all. After the congratulations had been indulged in the guests proceded to the tables which were bountifully loaded with delicacies and all seemed to partake as though to fill a long felt want. *M*any guests were present from surrounding towns, in all numbering near 150. The bride and groom took the 3.28 train for Freeburg, Pa., where the groom has located and enjoys a large practice.

A Dancing Class in Bellefonte.

In another column of this paper will be found a card from Miss Bishop, of Williamsport, announcing that she will be at the Bush House on Thursday evening to make arrangements for the establishing of a dancing school in Bellefonte. Miss Bishop, it will be remembered, is the young lady who won the free trip to Europe offered by the Philadelphia Press in its "Most popular school teacher" competition. The young lady has been teaching dancing in both Williamsport and Lock Haven and has met with unprecedented success in both places. We would advise all lovers of the light fantastic, as well as parents who have children old enough, to see Miss Bishop on Thursday evening next and by all means get up a nice large school for the young lady. Remember the day and time—6 to 8 o'clock in the evening.

"Sister Katherine" Drexel Takes Another Step Towards the Veil—She Carries $7,000,000 with her.

On Thursday last Miss Catharine M. Drexel, now known as "Sister Katherine," will make another step toward her resolution to take the veil and practically cut herself off from all her worldly connections. She carried $7,000,000 with her into church-life work.

For the past year and a half Miss Drexel has been a novice in the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy at Pittsburg. The retirement at first was in the nature of a trial of her calling, leaving her the privilege to turn back from the ascetic, religious life in case she should not be able to endure all the attendant hardships and privations.

Miss Drexel has been very happy during her novitiate, entering into the life-work of the sisters and aiding them in caring for the sick, teaching and other duties. Those of her friends who have thought that she might yet waver in her determination to become a sister, have perforce abandoned all hope that she may return to society, although her vows of next Thursday at the convent will not be final ones.

The coming ceremony will not be of special interest and importance, as it is to witness the founding of a new order of the Holy Sacrament, of which Sister Katherine will be the Superior. A new form of profession will be employed on this occasion, which has received the approval of Archbishop Ryan and one of the Congregation of Cardinals. Sister Katherine will devote her lifework to the religious and secular education of the Indians and poor colored people. For the Indians she and her sisters have already established the mission-school at Pine Ridge, which was destroyed by fire during the recent Indian troubles.

The institution is not only a school but a pleasant home, its inmates being completely cared for as well as educated. The average attendance was about 150 until the recent troubles occurred, when the pupils were taken away by their parents. The institution was under the direction of the Jesuit priest Father Jutz, who is greatly beloved among the savages. It is the largest of the seven missions established in the far West through the Misses Drexel.

The school has been in operation for about three years and will probably be rebuilt at the sole expense of Sister Katherine.

The convent to be built at Andalusia will be the mother-house of the order of the Holy Sacrament. The object of the convent will be to train the Sisters of their future duties of teaching and administering to the Indians and negroes, in the welfare of which races Sister Katherin takes especial interest. She will endeavor to select as her associates in this work women of high culture and mental ability. Branch missions will be established as found advisable, throughout the South and West. It is Miss Katherine Drexel's intention to devote her large fortune, of which, however, she controls only the yearly income, amounting to $600,000, to this work. As Superior of the order she will retain personal control of her money.

The property at Andalusia on which the convent will be built, comprises about sixty acres, and extends from the old Bristol turnpike to the Pennsylvania railroad and from Cornwall station to Andalusia. The building, which in its architecture will partake both of the Spanish and Italian style, resembling the quaint old Spanish missions of Mexico, will be erected on the top of a hill seventy-five feet above the Delaware river, commanding a beautiful vista of all the surrounding country. The main building will face the south and have a frontage of about 200 feet, with a square tower at the east end, rising to a height of 90 feet. Two wings, each about 40 by 117 feet, will extend north from the building. A wall will connect the two wings, and thus form a court yard, which will be used as a cloister garden. A rough local stone, with trimmings of dressed brown-stone, will be used in the construction of the building.

Red Spanish tiles will be used for the roof. An old Spanish bell, formerly in use in one of the missions in the extreme Southwest, will be suspended in the belfry. The main building will contain the Superiors's office, the novitiate, the lay sisters recreation room and a refectory. The second floor and the east wing will be used as dormitories, cells and a community room.

A hospital for the care of the people under the institution will be located in the tower. The chapel will occupy the west wing, and will furnish accommodations for sixty sisters. An open space wil be reserved in the centre for children in case an orphanage should be established in the future. An infirmary for the treatment of the sisters will adjoin the chapel, and will be so constructed as to enable sick persons to attend divine worship without inconvenience.

The east wing will contain reception rooms for the guests, chambers and refectory, Archbishop's room and parlor, and several other apartments. The building will be lighted by means of electricity and heated with steam. A farm will be conducted on the portion of the property not used for the building.

It is estimated that the building, when completed, will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000. Estimates are now being received by the architect, and the work will be begun early in the spring. The convent, when finished, will be christened, "St. Elizabeth's House."

Fillmore Pickings.

Misses Laura and Eva Kephart, two of Fillmore's most popular and accomplished young ladie, spent Saturday in Bellefonte.

Mr. John Reeser, accompanied by his amiable wife and charming daughter, Miss Minnie, also spent Saturday in the county capital.

Mr. George Wagner is now the biggest feeling man in our valley. Mrs. Wagner, one day last week, presented him with a great big baby boy, and George says it is so smart it will walk and talk in about a week from now. Congratulations.

The family of William B[illegible]le is a sadly stricken one. Recently one of the children was afflicted with what appeared to be and probably is, scarlet fever. One after the other took it until the entire family was afflicted. Then a daughter of Benjamin Bodle went to the afflicted family in the capacity of a nurse and now she is sick with the same disease.

Mr. Andrew Reeser, who is now butchering in Snow Shoe, was in this place last week visiting his parents.

*Mr. Ma*tlock Kephart and daughter departed on Saturday for Roanoke, Va., where they intend making their future home. We shall greatly miss this very amiable family.

Mr. Ed. McEntire, formerly of this place but who has spent a few months in Howard, will depart Wednesday for Tuscumbia, Mo., where he did reside for several years and where he will resume the practice of law, his chosen profession.

Well Known.

There is probable no business house in Western Penn'a so well known to the public in this and adjoining states as the one we are about to speak of. Well known for square and honest dealing, well known for keeping the largest and most complete stock in his line, well known for prompt shipping and safe delivery either by freight or express. We refer to the establishment of Max Klein, the wholesale liquor dealer of 82 Federal street, Allegheny, Pa. His arrangements with the different Mountain Distillers of Penn'a for their entire production, and his contract with foreign houses for direct importations, together with the experience of many years, makes him the leader in his line. His own "Silver Age Rye," sold now in every first-class place at $1 50 per quart, has no rival. His six year old Penn'a Ryes at $1 00 each, or six quarts for $5.00, are the finest goods offered. Send for his price list, acquaint yourself with his manner of doing business, and you will always send for any stimulant you want to.

HOLES MADE BY LIGHTNING.

Curious Tubes of Green Glass in Sand and in Mountain Rocks.

"Did you ever see the diameter of a lightning flash measured?" asked a geologist of a writer for the Washington Star. "Well, here is the case which once inclosed a flash of lightning, fitting it exactly, so that you can see just how big it was. This is called a 'fulgurite,' or 'lightning hole,' and the material it is made of is glass. I will tell you how it was manufactured, though it took only a fraction of a second to turn it out.

"When a bolt of lightning strikes a bed of sand it plunges downward into the sand for a distance less or greater, transforming simultaneously into glass the silica in the material through which it passes. Thus, by its great heat, it forms at once a glass tube of precisely its own size. Now and then such a tube, known as a 'fulgurite,' is found and dug up. Fulgurites have been followed into the sand by excavation for nearly 30 feet; they vary in interior diameter from the size of a quill to three inches or more, according to the 'bore' of the flash.

"But fulgurites are not alone produced in sand; they are found also in solid rock, though very naturally of slight depth and frequently existing merely as a thin glassy coating on the surface. Such fulgurites occur in astonishing abundance on the summit of Little Ararat in Armenia. The rock is soft and so porous that blocks a foot long can be obtained, perforated in all directions by little tubes filled with bottle green glass formed from the fused rock. There is a small specimen in the National Museum which has the appearance of having been bored by the teredo, the holes made by the worm subsequently filled with glass.

"Some wonderful fulgurites were found by Humboldt on the high Nevada de Toluca in Mexico. Masses of the rock were covered with a thin layer of green glass. Its peculiar shimmer in the sun led Humboldt to ascend the precipitous peak at the risk of his life."

Sawdust.

For several years certain Germans have been experimenting, with a view to utilizing sawdust as a material for mechanical purposes. It was discovered, years ago, that vegetable fiber, after being subjected to certain chemical action, and afterward to a pressure sufficient to expel all liquids from it, could be made into a substance almost indestructible by the elements, and of great utility in the mechanical and ornamental arts.

The difficulty has been that but few kinds of fiber were capable of the transformation by any known process. It might almost be said that the fiber of cotton alone produced satisfactory results.

Scientists are aware, however, that all vegetable fiber is, to a certain extent, identical; that is, it is cellulose more or less mixed with other substances; and they have believed that there must be some means by which the coarser kinds can be made useful for the purpose as well as cotton, which is nearly nearly cellulose.

A German scientific journal gives the results of experiments in that country. A substance has been made from common sawdust by means of an acid process that promises to be of great value. It is described as being exceedingly firm of texture and of great hardness, incapable of being bored by a common gimlet, more impervious to the action of the elements than the ordinary metals, and practically indestructible by fire.

It is said to be stronger than timber, and but a fraction of the weight of iron or steel. The cost of manufacture is asserted to be so low as to bring it into competition with both wood and iron. If all these claims can be made good, the result will be a great change in many important industries.

A Bill That Can't Be Beat.

Lawyer Simon Stevens, of New York, has a copy of a bill said to have been sent by a painter to an English art collector for repairs to the latter's art gallery. It is itemized as follows:

To filling up the chink in the Red Sea and repairing the damages of Pharaoh's host.

To cleaning six of the Apostles and adding an entirely new Judas Iscariot.

To a pair of new hands for Daniel in the lion's den and a set of teeth for the lioness.

To an alteration in the Belief, mending the Commandments, and making a new Lord's Prayer.

To new varnishing Moses' rod.

To repairing Nebuchadnezzar's beard.

To mending the pitcher of Rebecca.

To a pair of ears for Balaam and making a new tongue for the ass.

To a new broom and bonnet for the Witch of Endor.

To a sheet anchor, a jury mast, and a long boat for Noah's ark.

To painting 21 new steps to Jacob's ladder.

To mending the pillow stone.

To adding some Scotch cattle to Pharaoh's lean kine.

To making a new head for Holofernes and cleansing Judith's hands.

To giving a blush to the cheeks of Eve on presenting the apple to Adam.

To painting Jezebel in the character of a huntsman taking a flying leap from the walls of Jericho.

To repairing Solomon's nose and making a new nail to his middle finger.—[New York Times.

Books Made of Clay.

The most curious of all the curious things found in the excavations on the banks of the Tigris are the clay books of Nineveh. The chief library of the city was contained in the palace of Kanyunjik. The clay books, which composed its contents, were sets of tablets covered with very small letters. The writing was done when the clay of the tablet was soft. It was then baked to harden it. Each tablet was numbered just as librarians number the books of which they have charge.

In the Opera House Friday Night.

The popular German comedian and vocalist James A. Reilly, entertained a large and appreciative audience by his excellent redition of "The Broom-maker of Carlsbad." It deserves the favorable notices which the newspapers of this country have been giving them. Reilly is a genuine artist with an excellent German dialect, and the play gives him every opportunity to display his talents. His voice is good and his songs are better, and none that goes to hear and see him will be disappointed. The two children in the company, Robbie and Edna, are decidedly the best child performers seen here for many seasons, and probably their equal has never been seen on the stage. To see them is worth the price of the show.—Philadelphia Call, May 6, 1890.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines.

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's.

Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered."

Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

EVERY YEAR.

Ah! how sad to look before us
Every year:
While the cloud grows darker o'er us
Every year.
When the blossoms all are faded,
That to bloom we might have aided
And immortal garlands braided
Every year.

To the past go more dead faces
Every year;
Come no new ones in their places
Every year.
Everywhere the sad eyes meet us,
In the coming dusk they greet us,
And to come to them entreat us
Every year.

"You are growing old," they tell us
Every year;
"You are more alone," they tell us
Every year.
"You can win no new affection;
You have only recollection,
Deeper sorrow, and dejection,
Every year."

Yes, the shores of life are shifting
Every year;
And we are seaward drifting
Every year;
Old places changing fret us,
The living more forget us,
There are fewer to regret us
Every year.

But the truer life draws nigher
Every year;
And its morning star climbs higher
Every year;
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burden lighter,
And the dawn immortal brighter
Every year.

Thank God, no clouds are shifting
Every year
O'er the land to which we're drifting
Every year;
No losses there will grieve us,
Nor loving faces leave us,
Nor death of friend bereave us
Every year.

—[Albert Pike.

Couldn't Catch Him.

His eye lighted on the man wearing the wolfskin overcoat as soon as he entered the door, and the presumed far Westerner had scarcely got seated when he was accosted with:

"From Colorado or Nevada, I presume?"

"No, sir, from Idaho."

"Anywhere near Boise City?"

"Right from that place, sir."

"Ah! glad to have met you. Wanted to talk with you about the weather out there. Been very cold this winter?"

"Not so very. It was only 15 degrees below when I left."

"Is that the coldest?"

"Well we had it 23 degrees below for a few days in December."

"Did, eh? I have been keeping track of the weather as reported by the signal service. Here is Boise City pasted in this column."

"I see. You must have an object."

"Certainly. I travel a good deal, and I always like to stop a liar in the first round. This report does not show that you have even touched zero this winter. How is that?"

"My friend, is that the weather bureau report?" asked wolf overcoat.

"It is."

"Official?"

"Yes, sir. Can you get over it?"

"I don't have to, sir. I should have told you on the start that our town is divided. Half of it is built on an old glacier and the other half in the crater of a volcano. The signal office is located in the latter half, and even in January they have to pour water on the floor to cool it off. Up in my half we often have it 20 degrees below while they are picking roses down in the crater. Signal service is only for half the town, sir, and before you call a Boise City man a liar you should find out which half he lives in. Go away from me, sir! You look like a bad, bad man!"

A Cincinnati Idyl.

There is to be a wedding in the West End soon which will be the sequel to a rather romantic introduction. One night about a year ago a daintily attired little lady got aboard one of the 7th street cars on her way home from her day's work in an uptown office. The car was well filled, and the young lady was compelled to swing on the end of a strap for many squares. She was a little bit of a body, and she had to stretch her arms considerably to reach a strap for support. The car gave a lurch as it turned a corner, and a white band made its appearance about the little woman's waist. As it slowly grew larger broad smiles made their appearance on the faces of several of the male passengers. Feeling something was wrong, the young lady glanced down at her waist and at once blushed crimson with embarrassment. A young mechanic on his way home from work was in the car, and seeing the young lady's dilemma he proved himself a true gentleman by at once coming to her assistance. Stepping between her and the other passengers he said:

"Pardon me, miss, but if you wish to adjust your skirt I will screen you from the over curious eyes of these other passengers."

The little lady accepted the proffered aid with thanks, and after that they met nearly every evening on their way home. Their acquaintance ripened into something stronger than friendship, and the closing act in this "romance of a car strap" will be the wedding of these two. —[Cincinnati Enquirer.

Hog Raising in the South.

It is fair to say that in nineteen out of every twenty houses in Monroe county to-day, without regard to race, color, or previous condition of servitude of the occupants, spare ribs, backbone, jowl, sausage, crackling bread, and other things incidental to Southern hog killing, constitutes a large portion of the bill of fare. Hundreds of our farmers will make meat enough to do them; many will make enough to spare for sale, and all will save the meat of a few hogs. The colored farmers are no exception to this. One is recorded who put up 1,500 pounds, and has hogs enough yet to give him 1,500 pounds more. These hogs were mostly fattened on sweet potatoes, the corn crop of many farms being almost an entire failure, while the potato crop was most bountiful. Sweet potatoes have already contributed largely to pork making in this section of Mississippi.—[Aberdeen (Miss.) Examiner.

HELEN'S BABIES.

A Charming Story About John Habberton and His Lovely Wife.

None but a bright and good man could have written that most charming book of its charming kind, "Helen's Babies." John Habberton is a sincere lover of children—he loves them, their ways, their society, their prattle, and their philosophy. Some time ago he and his wife made it up between them to adopt a companion for their only little girl, who was lonesomelike for somebody to play with. Accordingly Mr. and Mrs. Habberton visited an orphan asylum and made choice of a very pretty and properly mannered little girl.

This child soon became a fast friend of little Miss Habberton, and she loved her new home very much, but in moments of confidence she hinted to Mrs. Habberton that she really pined for her little friend with whom she used to play at the asylum, a girl of about her own age. Mrs. Habbarton was touched by this recital of the child's secret sorrow, and she told Mr. Habberton about it.

"We must adopt that child, too," said Mr. Habberton.

"I was hoping you would say that," said Mrs. Habberton, "for that is what I am very desirous of doing."

Accordingly the second little girl was brought into the Habberton household. But this child, while she was affectionately grateful for the kindness of her foster parents, kept pining continually for her little lame brother who was still at the asylum and would probably remain there all the days of his life; she cried herself to sleep at night and talked so continuously of the poor little cripple during the day that presently the other members of the Habberton family were resolved to have that little lame boy at any price and at all hazards.

To make short of a long though pleasing narration, not only the little lame boy, but two other little orphans were adopted and taken into the Habberton family — five bright eyed, grateful hearted orphans to keep the domestic "wheels going round" in as charming a home as is to be found in the suburbs of New York. The little lame boy is king in that household; the others are kept busy waiting upon him, but their service is given cheerfully, tenderly, lovingly. Everybody is happy—the little daughter, the little lame boy, the other little ones, and the noble man and woman who are father and mother to the orphans; happiest of all are Mr. and Mrs. Habberton —happy in the blessings which certainly and constantly attend upon the good deeds which noble hearts, prompt and honest hands do.—[Eugene Field, in Chicago News.

Improvement in the Taste for Good Books.

One of the encouraging signs of the times is the growing taste among the book buying public for better made books, and, above all, for better books. This public seems to have broken away from old traditions, or at least traditions of 10 years standing, and is calling, not for what has been lauded in threadbare phrase as "the books no self respecting person can very well be without," but for the best in literature, and in the best shape obtainable. The sale of standard books—of works in the department of philosophy, poetry, and good literature generally—during the past three months at least, has been encouragingly good, and promises to continue. The publishers who have been in touch with the public seem to have taken their cue, and are making every effort to supply this demand for better books. The season just past has brought out better books in more appropriate forms than ever before. There have been fewer books of elephantine or microscopic form, and the edition de luxe seems more and more to become a realization of the true meaning of the term. It was once thought that an unwieldy book with a profusion of ill adjusted margin, a smattering of blurred daubs designated as etchings, a hideous binding, and a limited number of copies made up an edition de luxe. The public for awhile accepted this form because it was the "fad." But that has passed away, and what is now called for are books, printed in legible type on paper of the best quality, and put up in exquisite and appropriate shape, regardless of the number printed. For this class of books enough buyers can be found willing to pay any price within reasonable bounds; and on this line the publishers can and will make money. It has taken the trade years to learn this lesson. We trust its experience will be used to lasting profit.—[Publisher's Weekly.

Senator Evarts's Venerable Tile.

That eminently respectable old plug hat, which may be said to be almost a landmark to people who live in New York and Washington, and has such a world wide celebrity, that glorious old tile of Senator Evarts, is perhaps the most famous hat in America to-day. It has been pertinently asked: Where did he get it? The extraordinary thing about it is not that it looks old, but that it never looks new. There used to be an old German in Berlin who had exactly the same sized foot as the old Emperor William, and as the kaiser objected to wearing new boots his subject was made to break in all the emperor's footgear. He came to be known as boot stretcher to his majesty, and he received a snug pension for his services. Is there an individual hidden away in New York or Washington who has the same sized head as the senior Senator from New York to whom each new hat is given, and who is made to go forth and engage in rough and tumble fights for a few weeks in order that the hat may get that appearance which the Senator insists upon its having? Of course Mr. Evarts does get new hats. One hat won't hold together forever, but the uniform antiquity of his hats can only be accounted for on the theory above propounded.—[Chicago Herald.

The Revolution in Medicine.

While the data for an exact appreciation of the cure for consumption proposed by Koch are by no means complete, sufficient facts exist to warrant a discussion of the subject at the present time. The unprofessional reader should understand that Koch, mainly by reason of his discovery of the cause of consumption, has for several years been the most prominent figure in medical science that has been known in our generation. His methods have been models of scientific accuracy, and the authority of his statements is now almost unquestioned. In an article published by Koch simultaneously in this country and in Germany, on November 14, 1890, the details of the new treatment of several forms of tuberculosis are given. In a Berlin paper, six days later, is a description of the mode of preparation of the "curative lymph."

The latter, in all probability, is substantially correct; at least, no correction or contradiction has thus far appeared, and the method is essentially the one that is employed in obtaining poisonous products from other toxic bacilli. The method, as described, consists in placing in an inculating apparatus a pure culture of tubercle bacilli in gelatinized beef broth. The apparatus is divided into an upper and a lower portion by a diaphragm of ungalvanized porcelain, the bacilli being placed in the upper compartment. In the course of time the gelatine liquefies, and a liquid slowly filters through the porcelain into the lower compartment. This liquid is the curative lymph. The lymph thus obtained may contain a ptomaine, although the tubercle ptomaine, if it exists, has never before been found. Certain ptomaines are obtained from microorganisms by methods resembling that just described. The toxic ptomaines are produced by the toxic bacilli, and these are supposed to be the direct cause of various diseases, the bacilli being toxic only in so far as they produce these potomaines. As very many bacilli are not toxic, many ptomaines have no poisonous properties. Probably the production of ptomaines is limited, and in the case of toxic bacilli, those that have produced ptomaines in the body are thrown off, after having, to a greater or less extent, damaged the parts in which they have been lodged; but the organisms thus thrown off, if they find a lodgment in another body, may multiply, produce ptomaines again, and repeat the processes just described. It is in this way that certain diseases are propagated by contagion.

From the meager and disconnected reports that come from Europe, it appears that an analysis of the lymph fails to reveal the presence of a ptomaine chemically considered; but the lymph certainly contains one or more substances capable of producing certain of the effects of toxic ptomaines. However, the chemistry of the ptomaines is in its infancy, and we must await exact and elaborate researches before it will be possible to decide upon the composition and properties of the lymph obtained by Koch. The statements made by Koch himself are of a character fully to justify the profound impression they have made upon the public as well as upon the medical profession. Koch's previous career entitles his utterances to the most respectful consideration. A few years since he discovered the cause of tuberculosis, and this discovery at the present day has no scientific opposition worthy of serious consideration. He now states that he probably has discovered a cure for tuberculosis.

I can not but think that this also will soon become an acknowledged fact. I can not resist the conviction that the idea in the mind of Koch which led to the discovery of the curative lymph, was that a toxic bacillus is capable of producing a poison which would possibly destroy the bacillus or at least limit its activity and dislodge it from the system. Probably the curative and active agent in the lymph was obtained from tubercle bacilli and produced by them. It is now said that Koch regards his studies in tuberculosis as complete, awaiting only the results of experience with regard to the permanency of the cure and its application to advanced cases of disease. It is also said that Koch is extending his experiments and is endeavoring to find cures for typhus and typhoid, scarlet fever, measles, and diphtheria. It may be that his line of research will be in the direction of finding a special poison, produced by microorganisms peculiar to each infectious disease, which will act upon these micro organisms and the diseased parts as the curative lymph has been found to act upon tubercle bacilli and tuberculous tissue.

It is possible, in the light of what has recently been accomplished by Koch, that in the near future many curative lymphs will be discovered, each produced by the special microorganism of a particular disease. It will then be not too much to expect that these agents will promptly arrest the different diseases to which they are applicable. For example, the typhoid lymph, the diphtheritic lymph, the lymph for measles, that for scarlet fever, and so on, will promptly arrest these diseases and save patients from the degenerations and the accidents which are liable to occur when morbid processes are allowed to run their course; and convalescence will be prompt, because the disease will not have produced damage which can be repaired only by time. Truly, this would be a revolution in medicine, and it now seems to be impending.—[Dr. Austin Flint, in The Forum for January.

Archdeacon Colley, preaching on Satan recently at St. James's church, Marylebone, London, repiying to an imaginary remonstrance from those who believe in giving the devil his due, exclaimed: "Ah, my friends, if we gave the devil his due many of us would be missing." The awkwardness of the use of "us" in such a case occurred to him afterward, and he seemed seriously embarrassed, while the congregation smiled.

FAMILY FINANCIERING.

"They tell me you work for a dollar a day;
How is it you clothe your six boys on such pay?"

"I know you will think it conceited and queer,
But I do it because I'm a good financier.

There's Pete, John, Jim, and Joe, and William and Neel,
A half dozen boys to be clothed up and fed.

And I buy for them all good, plain victuals to eat;
But clothing—I only buy clothing for Pete.

When Pete's clothes are too small for him to get on,
My wife makes 'em over and gives 'em to John.

When for John, who is ten, they have grown on of date,
She just makes 'em over for Jim, who is eight.

When for Jim they've become too ragged to fix,
She just makes 'em over for Joe, who is six.

And when little Joseph can wear 'em no more,
She just makes 'em over for Bill, who is four.

And when for young Bill they no longer will do,
She just makes 'em over for Neel, who is two.

So you see if I get enough clothing for Pete,
The family is furnished with clothing complete."

"But when Ned has got through with the clothing, and when He has thrown it aside—what do you do with it then?"

"Why, once more we go round the circle complete,
And begin to use it for patches for Pete."
—[S. W. Foss, in Yankee Blade.

Gambetta's Mother.

The story of the death of the mother of Gambetta, the great statesman of the third French republic, which has just been related by his friend, M. Emmanuel Arene, is one of rare pathos, and at the same time one of great simplicity. Gambetta's parents were exceedingly simple country people; his father was a tradesman of Cahors, in southern France. After Gambetta became a famous man in France, his father and mother went to live at Nice, where they were faithfully cared for by an old servant, and where they were often visited by their famous son.

Toward the end of his career, and when he was at the height of his power, being in fact, though not in title, the head of the republic, Gambetta's mother was seized with a sudden desire to go to Paris. "I must see Leon," she said.

Her husband protested, and the old woman servant, Miette, threw up her hands in horror. "To Paris, madame, at this time of year!" It was winter. "There's no sense in it!"

There was no sense in it, but Madame Gambetta was determined to go. She went to the train with more of vigor than she had shown for years, and traveled straight to Paris.

There she went to the house of her daughter, and arrived quite prostrated. Within 24 hours she fell upon her bed, stricken with a mortal stroke.

At this moment great events were pending in the parliament of the nation, and questions involving the standing of France among the nations were at stake. Gambetta could not leave his place in the chamber, but each day's session done, he rushed with desperate haste to the little iron bedstead upon which his mother lay.

There he remained, watching, waiting, the greater part of each night, and all the time his old mother regarded him with loving eyes, though she could not speak.

On the third day Gambetta made a great and famous address in the chamber of deputies. His ringing voice, his eye flashing with fire, and his magnificent spirit and vigor gave no sign of the anguish and strain he had been under, and was still under. It was the greatest speech, people said, that he had ever made. All Europe was listening. When it was over, Gambetta descended in haste from the tribune. A dear friend, just from his sister's house, stood near with pale face.

"Well, well?" asked Gambetta breathlessly.

"Well, you must have courage," the friend stammered, grasping him by the hand.

They passed into a side room. Dead! The great man burst into a desperate and piteous weeping. He sobbed like a child, and the voice which had a moment before rung through the chamber, could only speak, in faint, weak tones, one word:

"Mother! mother!"

The friend siezing him by the arm, led him out into the street, where the newsboys were already shouting, "Great speech of Gambetta! Gambetta's great speech!"

He Was in a Box.

A policeman at the Polk street station yesterday morning walked up to a young man whom he had observed hurrying to and fro in a feverish way for an hour or more and said:

"My friend, what is the trouble? Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Do for me? Je-roos'lum! No! Not unless you can bring back that 8.35 train. I'll bet a thousand dollars it left ahead of time."

"Can't you go on another train?"

"Certainly. That's what I'm waiting for. But it doesn't leave till 3.30 this afternoon and won't get to where I'm going till about midnight, and that won't do at all."

"If it's anything important can't you send a telegram?"

"Send a telegram? I've sent half a dozen already. The fact is I am on my way to a wedding to take place at 7 o'clock this evening. I've got some presents for the bride."

"Well," said the policeman, "the case isn't so bad. You can deliver the presents the next morning. The wedding will be over, of course, but——"

"Wedding over? Jumpin' Jupiter? It won't be over. That's the trouble."

"Why not?"

"Because it can't come off unless I'm on hand. I've got to be there. I'm the man that's going to be married. Policeman, you mean well, but you can't pour any of the oil of joy into this wounded bosom. I'll feel obliged if you'll go away somewhere and sit down."—[Chicago Tribune.

A BURST OF ROYAL TEMPER.

What Happened Between William III of the Netherlands and Thorbecke.

King William III of the Netherlands, who died a while ago, was, in his best days, a man of frightful temper, says the New York Sun. The person who excited him above all others was the lank, phlegmatic Thorbecke, who left the desk of a Utrecht professorship to become a minister of state. The king expressed his contempt for Thorbecke by always addressing him as "Sir Professor." In 1870, while William was drifting swiftly toward an alliance with France, in order that he might avenge the wrongs all Dutchmen feel they have sustained at German hands, the "Professor" was selected to convince the king that his people would not support him in such a course. Thorbecke entered the king's bed chamber with his hands behind him on the morning of the day of the decision.

"Good morning, sir professor. What is the news?" asked the king.

"Nothing special, sire; only the people of The Hague are talking a good deal of nonsense," said Thorbecke, with diplomatic deliberateness.

"Humph! Concerning my ministers?"

"No, sire," droned on Thorbecke, "concerning you."

"Concerning me?" shouted the king, "and what oh, honored professor, concerning me?"

"Sire, I hardly wish to repeat it. I——"

Enough! I wish to hear it."

"Well, sire, the people of The Hague say you are as crazy as a loon."

Biff! Like a shot the short, heavy body of the king bounced from the bed to the floor. Purple and speechless, he caught up a great silver inkstand to throw it at Thorbecke. His hand became entangled for a moment in the bed curtains. Thorbecke strode up to him, thrust down his keen white face to the level of the king's eyes, and said in a tone of icy indifference:

"And if you strike me with the inkstand the people of The Hague will be right."

The king dropped the inkstand in the curtain that had caught it and glowered at the professor, who hastened to pile reasons on reasons why the Netherlands should remain neutral during the Franco-German war. A few hours later, in the presence of all his ministers, William III tore into bits and stamped on the declaration of war which he had all but forced on his unwilling subjects.

The Exception Found at Last.

He sat in the lobby of one of our prominent hotels. His hair was as white as snow and matted in thin and scraggy locks over a high and creased forehead. Lines of sorrow marked his face and ran through his features as numerous as the rivers in central Africa. In his eyes there was sadness, which bespoke a weight of sorrow on the mind, and seemed to suggest that grief had greatly assisted time in turning the hair white and furrowing the face. A number of men were sitting around him and they had been telling stories of the "pistol which had not be loaded" and its fatality. The white haired man said in a plaintive voice:

"I have a story to tell. I returned home one day from my place of business. Everything had gone my way that day, among the things a good many dollars, and I felt unusually gay and skittish. I told my wife of my good fortune and asked her to get me a match. We were standing by a dressing case, and when she refused I opened a drawer and drew forth a pistol, which I knew was not loaded, as I had examined it the night before. Leveling the pistol straight at her heart—poor woman, she's dead now—I playfully threatened to shoot her. There was a look of trusting, confident love in her eyes—shall I forget that—as she dared me. I placed my hand on the trigger and pulled it. I closed my eyes, afraid to open them. Oh! it was awful.

"After a time, it seemed hours, I opened my eyes and put the pistol back."

"But your wife—was she killed instantly?" eagerly asked three questioners.

"No-o-o."

"A lingering, painful death?" sympathetically they asked.

"No; as I said the pistol was not loaded. My wife was unhurt, of course."

"But you said she was dead?"

"Yes, she died about two years ago, of old age."

"And why did you tell this story?"

"To show you that there are times when the pistol is really not loaded. There are exceptions to all rules, you know. This is the one exception to the seven instances you gentlemen have recited.—[Louisville Post.

Unprofitable Haste.

"H-h-how m-m-m-uch f-f-for a ro-ro-room?" stuttered a man named Pettengill who registered from Jackson, Mich., at the Auditorium.

"On what floor?" asked the clerk,

"S-s-sev-en-t-t-th f-f-floor."

"Five dollars," was the prompt reply.

"I t-t-th-in-k I'll g-g-g-g-o——"

"Well, I can give you a $3 room," the clerk made haste to say, "and it is one of the best rooms on the seventh floor. Front! Show this gentleman to 728."

The haste of the clerk was the means of depriving the Auditorium Company of $10, for Mr. Pettengill said afterward he intended to say he "thought he would go right up," and that he would want the room for five days.

"B-b-but t-t-the c-c-clerk d-d-did-n-n't w-w-wa-it," explained the Jackson man.

HISTORICAL NICKNAMES.

Biography in a Nutshell—Some Facts Worth Remembering.

English public men of past days were not without their nicknames, and what strikes one in connection with them is their peculiarity and designation. To-day these names are evidently on the decrease.

O'Connell, the great Irishman, was popularly styled "The Agitator," "The Liberator," "The Big O" and "The Great O."

Sir Robert Peel was for many years familiarly called "Orange Peel," in consequence of his somewhat remarkable opposition to the Roman Catholics while acting as chief secretary.

Of Lord Brougham, it is related that while practicing at the bar, he came in contact with Lord Elton, who persisted in calling him "Mr. Broffam." Owing to a peculiar twitching of the face, Brougham was known in parliament as "Harry Twitcher."

The Duke of Marlborough is known to us best, perhaps, as the "Handsome Englishman," but in his time he was also the "British Pallas," "Humphrey Hocus," and the "Silly Duke," as his popularity waxed or waned.

Sir Richard Steele was commonly called by his detractors "a twopenny author," in consequence of his publishing at twopence that famous weekly journal, The Tattler. In addition to this he was often referred to by Addison as "Little Dicky."

George Saville (Viscount Halifax) was popularly known as the "Trimmer," so designated because of his leading a party which vacillated between the Whigs and Tories.

Sir Robert Walpole was dubbed by his opponents the "Grand Corrupter" and the "Leviathan," and Horace Walpole, in his letters upon Sir Robert, applies to him the sobriquet of "Blue-string," having reference to the blue ribband of the Order of the Garter which he was in the habit of wearing.

Bolingbroke bore the designation of "High Mettled Harry," while Pulteney, Earl of Bath, was known as "that weather cock." A somewhat amusing incident is recorded of George Greenville, who, when speaking in the house in favor of Dashwood's financial statement, repeatedly asked the opposition where they would have a tax laid, reiterating the inquiry by saying, "Let them tell me where!" To which Pitt murmured the line of a well known song, "Gentle Shepherd, tell me where?" It was long before Greenville lost the nickname of "Gentle Shepherd."

Horace Walpole was nicknamed by Wordsworth the "Frenchified Coxcomb," and was frequently referred to by Disraeli as the "Puck in Literature," owing to his literary fabrications. Lord Liverpool was called by Cobbett "Pink Nose."

The Annual Fire Loss.

The total fire loss for 1890 is estimated at $108,000,000, as compared with $144,000,000 in 1889, $100,000,000 in 1888, $130,000,000 in 1887, and $115,000,000 in 1886. This matter is of more importance than is generally believed. To the country at large there is no compensation for the loss by fire; insurance distributes this tax, but does not in the least make it good. On the contrary, to the actual loss by fire must be added the cost of distribution; or, in other words, the expense of all the insurance companies doing business in the country; a large sum in itself. To this, again, must be added the cost of all the fire departments and the cost of all the devices for avoiding fires and for making houses fireproof. The cost of the fire department of Louisville is now more than $150,000, from which statement one may get some idea of the total expense, remembering that there are 20 cities in America larger than Louisville. The actual loss by fire was for last year about as large as the money appropriated for the payment of pensions. A decrease in this item of $30,000,000 is, especially at this time, a cause for congratulation. It is not merely "money," but so much capital; it is just $30,000,000 added to the resources of the country at a time when these resources have been subjected to severe drains.

It is well always to remember that, while times may be hard and business disturbed by vicious legislation and certain temporary causes, the energies of the American people are almost inexhaustible; hence we are able to do and endure what would permanently cripple any other people. The loss, as we have said, is total; and it is a good report, a healthy and hopeful sign, when the insurance companies say that this tax of 1889 was less by $30,000,000 than it was the year before.—[Louisville Courier Journal.

Cold Weather Rules.

Always regulate the clothing to suit the temperature; a too heavy wrap induces copious perspiration, thus causing debility, and consequently the danger of taking cold is increased. Always open or throw off a wrap on going into a warmer atmosphere.

Keep the back, especially between the shoulder blades, well protected, as well as the chest.

Never lean the back against anything cold.

After exercising, never ride in an open carriage or near an open car window. Avoid draughts, in or out of doors.

Never stand still in the street, especially after walking, and most particularly when exposed to a cold wind. Also always avoid standing on ice or snow.

Keep the mouth closed as much as possible when in the open air, particularly upon going from a warmer atmosphere. By breathing through the nose the air becomes warmed before it reaches the lungs. A silk handkerchief, a piece of loosely woven woolen cloth, or knitted woolen material, placed over the mouth and nose, or the mouth only, when in the open air, is very beneficial for persons with weak lungs, and should never be neglected when the temperature is at or below freezing point.

Never take warm drinks immediately before going out into the cold, and never start on a journey in the morning before eating breakfast.

LENTEN BILL OF FARE.

Archbishop Ryan's Instructions to the Faithful for Lent.

Archbishop Ryan has issued the following letter to the Catholics in his diocese, directing their course of life during the season of Lent, which began yesterday, Ash Wednesday:

1. All the faithful who have completed their 21st year are bound to observe the fast of Lent, unless dispensed for legitimate reasons.

2. The persons exempt from fasting are: The infirm, those under 21 years of age, women in pregnancy or nursing infants, those who are obliged to do hard labor, and those who are enfeebled by old age.

3. Only one full meal a day is allowed, except on Sundays.

4. On the days on which permission is granted to eat meat, both meat and fish are not to be used at the same meal.

5. A collation or partial meal is allowed in the evening. It should never exceed eight ounces.

6. By virtue of an indult of the Holy See, dated August 3, 1887, the following special dispensations are granted:

Bread, butter, cheese, fruit of all kinds, salads, vegetables and fish are permitted at the collation. Milk and eggs are also a lowed.

7. It is lawful to drink in the morning some warm liquid, such as tea, coffee or chocolate, and to partake of a small portion of bread, not exeeeding two ounces.

8. The use of lard in the place of butter is allowed in preparing fish, vegetables, etc.

9. The use of flesh meat will be allowed at any time on Sundays, and once a day on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, excepting Ember Saturday and Holy Saturday.

10. Persons exempt from the obligations of fasting, by age or laborious occupation, are not restricted to the use of meat at one meal only, on those days on which its use is granted by dispensation.

11. When the principal meal cannot be taken at midday it is permitted to change the order, taking the collation then and the dinner in the evening.

The earnest Catholic will attend daily mass, when possible, and the extra religious services appointed for Lent, especially the devotions of the "Stations of the Cross."

A GRAND BANQUET.

MILESBURG THE SCENE OF QUITE AN ENJOYABLE OCCASION THURSDAY NIGHT.

On Thursday evening a number of the young folks of Milesburg gave a brilliant social gathering and banquet in Boggs' Ha l, which proved to be the most fashionable as well as elegant occasion of the season. Guests were present from Bellefonte, Centre Hall, Lemont, State College, and Mt. Eagle, fifty couple in all. The hall was handsomely decorated for the occasion and the music furnished was simply exquisite. Dancing, singing and all kinds of games imaginable were indulged to make the time pass merrily and all too swiftly.

But the occasion of the evening was the supper, which had been prepared under the direction of Misses Mary Lingle and Bella Harvey. The tables, which were set on the stage, groaned under their weight of good things. Chickens, turkey, various cold meats, salads, sandwiches, oranges, apples, banannas, grapes, ice cream, cakes, &c., composed the bill of fare. And to say that the young people did justice to this elegant spread would be putting it mildly.

When they first gathered around the table it groaned under the weight of good things, when they got up—well it wasn't the table that groaned then. But they had a grand time until about two o'clock when the party broke up and all dispersed to their several homes well pleased with the evening's enjoyment and carrying with them feelings never to be forgotten.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

BELVERNON, Pa., Nov. 27, '90.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:

Gents—I would like to make known to those who are almost persuaded to use Kendall's Spavin Cure the fact that I think it is a most excellent Liniment. I have used it on a Blood Spavin. The horse went on three legs for three years when I commenced to use your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I used ten bottles on the horse and have worked him for three years since and has not been lame.

Yours truly, WM. A. CURL.

GERMANTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 2, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gents: In praise of Kendall's Spavin Cure I will say, that a year ago I had a valuable young horse become very lame, hock enlarged and swollen. The horsemen about here (we have no Veterinary Surgeon here) pronounced his lameness Blood Spavin or Thoroughpin, they all told me there was no cure for it, he became about useless, and I considered him almost worthless. A friend told me of the merits of your Kendall's Spavin Cure, so I bought a bottle, and I could see very plainly great improvements immediately from its use, and before the bottle was used up I was satisfied that it was doing him a great deal of good. I bought a second bottle and before it was used up my horse was cured and has been in the team doing heavy work all the season since last April, showing no more signs of it. I consider your Kendall's Spavin Cure a valuable medicine, and it should be in every stable in the land. Respectfully yours,

EUGENE DEWITT.

A MODERN COURTSHIP.

"Because you're from the town," she said.
"And live in style, you know.
Dear, don't it make you blush to see
Your girl in calico?"

"I've always lived here on the farm
And I can not compare
With city girls who dress in style
And know just what to wear.

Her fresh, sweet face was now upturned
To his. She heaved a sigh.
"And yet I might (she looked quite grave)
Be stylish if I try."

"No, no," he cried, as close he wrapped
Her in his manly arms,
"I'll take you, darling, as you are,
Without the city charms.

"I'll take you and I'll cherish you,
You and your goodly pile,
For your papa's swell farm, my dear,
Is more to me than style."

HE CHANGED TO STONE.

Singular Man in France Who Can Make His Body Rock Like.

One of the most remarkable human curiosities ever seen has just been examined by M. de Quatrefages, the French naturalist. He is a provincial named Simeon Aiguier and is 30 years old. Aiguier, thanks to his peculiar system of muscles and nerves, can transform himself in a most wondrous fashion. He has very properly dubbed himself "L'Homme Protee."

At one moment, assuming the rigidity of a statue, his body may be struck sharply, the blows falling on a block of stone. At another he moves his intestines from above and below and right to left into the form of a large foot ball and projects it forward, which gives him the appearance of a colossally stout personage.

He then withdraws it into the thorax, opening like a cave, and the hollow look of his body immediately remin s one of a skeleton. Aiguier successfully imitates a man subjected to the tortures of the rack, as also a man hanging himself, and assumes a strikingly cadaverous look. What most astonished M. de Quatrefages was the stoppage of the circulation of the blood, now on the left and now on the right side, which was effected by muscular contraction.—[Cincinnati Enquirer.

Dreams of the Deaf.

An expert West Philadelphia physician in talking of the dreams of the deaf and dumb remarked:

In visiting institutions for the blind and the deaf I have made inquiry, and have never found an instance of a person born deaf or of a child who lost his hearing before he was 4 years of age dreaming of hearing. Among the results of recent inquiries I present the following from the principal of the State Institution of the Blind and Deaf at St. Augustine, Fla.:

"I have closely questioned the deaf children here as to whether they have ever dreamed of hearing, and the invariable answer is 'No.' I have asked the same question of upward of 50 deaf persons with the same result, except where the person interrogated had lost his hearing after learning to talk. These last mentioned are all grown persons of some education who understood the question fully and are very positive that they had never dreamed of hearing more than a rumbling sound.

A "Golden" Rule for Advertisers.

Said a gentleman, the managing man of a concern, the only rule I have for determining whether or not a paper is a desirable one for our house to use as an advertising medium is to ascertain if the paper, upon examination, has interest for me as a reader. I go through its columns carefully and consider what is being presented from month to month to its subscribers and readers, and then attempt to conceive of the kind of people who are likely to take the paper in order to obtain such information or such reading matter. I believe, he continued, that this rule enables me to weed out many papers which have only a free circulation and some of those also which do not employ editors or which do not make any real attempt to take high rank as periodicals. When I find a paper that I think I could afford to pay for as a subscriber on account of the matter it contains, I am impressed with the idea that it circulates among a class that I can afford to pay for to reach with my advertisement. —[The Millstone.

A Successful Stratagem.

Among the hill tribes of the Anglo-Indian frontier cunning is quite as highly esteemed as personal prowess; but even these masters of stratagem are occasionally outwitted. A Hindoo trader who had occasion to pass through their country recently laid out all his money in several large diamonds, which he bound round his head with a soiled rag made to look like the bandage of a wound. He then put on ragged clothes, and loaded a donkey with loaves of spiced bread, such as the mountaineers like, putting a good dose of opium in each. He soon fell in with half a dozen brigands, who paid no attention to the ragged traveler, but pounced upon the bread and ate the whole of it. The opium soon put them to sleep, whereupon the traveler took what money they had, their arms, and the best of their clothes, and went his way in peace. But he took care not to travel by that road again.

"Sometimes," writes a correspondent of a trade paper, "I have had to make holes in steel that was too hard to cut or file easily. Then I make a mixture that will cut a hole. I mix one ounce of sulphate of copper, quarter of an ounce of alum, half a teaspoonful of powdered salt, a gill of vinegar, and 20 drops of nitric acid. This will make a hole."

A Fine Child.

Caller—And this is the new baby.
Fond Mother—Isn't he splendid?
Caller—Yes, indeed.
Fond Mother—And so bright! See how intelligently he breathes!

—The voters of Bellefonte demonstrated on Tuesday that there is a limit to all endurance. They do not intend that one man shall have a monopoly of the best paying office in the borough.

—It is stated that Mr. Eustice Grimes, the efficient stenographer in the Buffalo Run Railroad office, has secured a nice position under Secretary Harrity, at Harrisburg and will depart for that place in the near future.

—Mr. G. S. Keller, the wide-awake woollen goods manufacturer of Houserville, was in Bellefonte on Thursday and made us a short pop call, but long enough to renew his subscription to the Republican, which, he said, was the best paper in the county.

—Philipsburg seems to be singularly unfortunate in the great number of accidents, deaths, etc., it has been having of late. On Saturday morning Mrs. Alfred Wallace fell down the cellar steps into two feet of water and was drowned before help could arrive.

—J. W. Gephart, Esq., will, in the next few days, move his family from his present abode on Allegheny St. to the handsome Queen Anne residence on Curtin street, lately occupied by A. G. Curtin, jr., the latter having removed to Philadelphia a short time ago.

—Reports from all the flooded districts state that the waters are going down. In Bellefonte Spring creek has fallen about one foot. The Bald Eagle is receding and, if the weather continues as it now is everything will be all right in twenty-four hours more.

—It is now definitely known that Rev. J. A. Woodcock and family will shortly move to Bellefonte. The time of their return, we are informed will be the first of April. They, for some time, at least, will board at and room in Miss Magill's boarding house on Allegheny street.

—At last Pennsylvania's junior Senator has come forward, and in one sweeping statement made a denial, full and complete, of all the charges laid at his door by the Democrats. He is to be congratulated on his course, but it is, nevertheless, to be deplored that he did not do so long ago.

—The receipts of the lecture to be given by Gen. B. F. Fisher, under the auspices of Gregg Post in the court house on the evening of the 21st, will be divided between the relief fund of the Post and the Ladies' Aid Society. This is a most worthy object and the same should be well patronized.

—On Thursday morning Mr. Hamill Boal, surveyor and draughtsman, departed for Havana, New York, where he will have charge of a corps of engineers doing work on the new railroad Mr. Thomas Collins is building up there. Mr. Boal's family will join him in a few weeks.

—General Hastings is one of the most taking public speakers in Pennsylvania. It matters not the time or the topic, the General always sizes up to the occasion and has the happy faculty of being interesting, instructive and impressive. All those who heard him in the court house Sunday will bear us out in the above assertion.

—The remains of Miss Maggie Kelley, the sixteen-year old daughter of Mr. John Kelley, of Mill Hall, who died last Wednesday from croup, were brought to Bellefonte last Saturday morning and interred in the Catholic cemetery beside the grave of her mother, who died some six years ago. The funeral took place at half-past ten o'clock.

—The Pennsylvania State Union of Christian Endeavor will hold a District Convention in the First Presbyterian Church in Tyrone on Thursday, April 9th, beginning at two o'clock, p. m., and continuing afternoon and evening. This district comprises Clearfield, Centre, Mifflin, Juniata, Huntingdon and Blair counties. This convention has been called by the direction of the President and officers of the State Union, many of whom will be present and address the meeting. Rev. George B. Stewart will preside, and Prof. H. F. Faber, of Boston Conservatory of Music, will be at the organ during both sessions.

—Mr. Tom Mitchell gave a nice little euchre party Thursday night at his father's residence. There were enough present to fill five tables. The game was indulged until about ten o'clock, when choice refreshments were served, after which all those who were not observing Lent beguiled a couple of hours away by tripping the light fantastic.

—Some of our newspaper brethren are making a great fuss about Lock Haven already commencing to boom it up for the fourth of July. They evidently don't know how much "booming" it takes in that dead old town to create a little excitement, even on the fourth of July. And it is really strange, too, with such enterprising(?)newspaper men there as Joe Furey, et al.

—Yesterday (Monday) Mr. John P. Harris, sent to Tyrone the draughts and plans of the new Blair County Bank building to be soon erected in Tyrone. The drawings were made by Architect Robert Cole and present a building of great beauty and workmanship. It will occupy the northwest corner of Main and Juniata streets, just opposite the City Hotel.

—The Chautauqua Circle met at the residence of John Ardell, Jr., on Tuesday evening. The attendance was good, considering the bad weather. The meeting was an unusually interesting one owing to the fact that nearly all the members read an essay about some particular time in the XVIIth Century. Light refreshments were furnished the members of the Circle by the agreeable hostess, Mrs. Ardell, after which the Circle adjourned.

—On Satuaday morning between 4 and 5 o'clock, Nathaniel Woomer, a brakeman on the Tyrone and Clearfield railroad, fell from his train to the track below and was run over and killed. Before the fact was discovered four entire trains had passed over his body, cutting it all to pieces and dragging the body almost a mile from where the accident occurred and where the limbs were found. Mr. Woomer was a cousin of James Woomer, of the telephone exchange in this place. He was married and leaves a wife and four children.

To Star Course Ticket Holders.

Through a statement in the press, after the entertainment given by the Redpath Concert company, that the Star Course closed with that entertainment the state agent, Mr. McQuown, cancelled our engagement with the Nashville Students, relying upon the correctness of the statement without consulting us. Mr. McQuown was written to with regard to our date and replied as above, being very sorry, etc., but it was impossible to give us the Students as they were booked for Canada. We will, we trust, be able to secure an equally good company in their place, and ask you to retain your tickets and your patience, as well, for the W. C. T. U. will fulfill their contract with four entertainments or else refund to all who present their tickets. It was simply a mistake which should have been corrected at the time; and also, which should have been inquired into before booking the company for Canada.

He is Not the Man

Tuesday evening Mr. Meyer received the photograph of the man held at Chillicothe, Ohio, under the supposition that it might be John Wilson, the murderer of Harry Waterhouse, but it is not he. One glance at the picture was enough to satisfy any person who had ever seen Wilson that the two were not identical.

Will Lecture in Bellefonte.

General George A. Sheridan, the gifted orator and lecturer, will deliver his great lecture entitled "The Modern Pagan," in Bellefonte on Saturday evening, March 7th. This lecture, which is the triumph of George Sheridan's genius, has been delivered in every State in the Union, and is the most effective reply ever made to Col. Ingersoll's attack on the Christian religion. It will be delivered under the auspices and for the benefit of the Bellefonte M. E. Church.

A tall man is sometimes very short, but the average man is never so short, that he cannot buy Old Saul's Catarrh Cure to cure himself when afflicted with catarrh.

SEASONABLE SNAP SHOTS.

AS GATHERED BY A FAIR CORRESPONDENT.

A great many girls are heard to remark that they like to trade at the Eureka Grocery Store. The ladies are all after a title now-a-days, and the agreeable young man who presides at that establishment is an Earl.

***

A few days since as a good respectable cow was walking up High street, two young men were seen to rudely jostle against her, and one of the aforesaid fellows actually jabbed her side with an umbrella. Now it must be remembered that Bellefonte cows are privileged characters—have a perfect right to thoroughfares so long as it is daylight. Of course if this gentle animal had disregarded all rules of decency and been guilty of promenading streets late at night there might have been some cause for her being molested. But we think all right minded persons will respect the rights of this domestic. Young men give her half of the pavement anyway, and the ladies—well, they will probably give it all to her if they see her approaching.

***

The Chautauqua Circle was entertained this week by Miss Lide Thomas at her father's residence on Allegheny street. The meeting was an interesting one, and the refreshments choice. Mrs. James A. Beaver was present as a guest, and her agreeable presence gave much pleasure to all.

Bellefonte streets are perhaps no better than those of other towns but I sometimes wonder if other towns have groups of statuary upon the corners as we have here. I mean human statuary called men, who congregate on the street corners, and often the crossings, causing ladies to step in the worse parts of the pavements in order to pass around them. The word statuary seems appropriate, because seemingly they are immovable, but I think if they were really wooden or marble figures they would be promptly wheeled aside and not left to barricade the crossings. ### For Sweet Charity's Sake

We again desire to call the attention of all our readers to the lecture and flag presentation to take place in the court house next Saturday night, and given under the auspices of Gregg Post. The cause for which this is held is as noble a one as the cause which instituted the Grand Army of the Republic. It is for the relief of the needy. The proceeds will be equally divided between the Post relief fund and the Ladies Aid Society. Owing to the unusually hard times there has been need of great relief to men and families in and around Bellefonte and the various secieties have drained to the last cent the funds on hand for that purpose. There is still call for help and the entertainment next Saturday night is held as a means of procuring money to aid those in need. General B. F. Fisher, an old Centre county boy, will deliver his famous lecture, "Reminiscences of Prison Life." After the meeting a beautiful flag, the gift of the Women's Relief Corps, will be presented to the Post by General D. H. Hastings, and received for the organization by Ex-Governor Beaver.

Major McCauley will also be present and will sing some of his stirring army songs. The entertainment and lecture promises to be one of the most interesting occasions that Bellefonters have witnessed for some time. Everybody wants to go and so do you.

—Reports from all over the county show that the republican tidal wave spread far and wide.
